Solomon Bart, from St. Johns, passed through here Saturday accompanied by his son. They were on their way to California, Sol's health demanding a change of climate. He is one of the oldest pioneers in Arizona, coming to this part of the country in 1860. It is said he helped blaze the trail through Flagstaff and Chavez Pass. He was a member of the territorial legislature in the early 80's.

Lyman S. (Tom) Drumm came in on Saturday from Mormon Lake, suffering greatly from gangrene in his foot, caused, he believes, from trimming a corn too closely. He is at the home of his stepson, R. L. Neill, and while suffering a great deal of pain, is beginning to rest somewhat easier. He is one of the old-timers in this section to whom broken bones and other serious injuries didn't use to make much matter, and is rather miffed over being laid low by such a trifling cause.

Rancher Putnam of Government Prairie was in town Monday, limbering up a little from the sundry strains and stresses still remaining from his recent experience with his 1600-pound stallion. He was at Jim Rupe's with the animal when it took a notion to run away. Putnam interfered and during the fight which covered several acres, the animal walked on both sides of Putnam's head, in the middle of his back and on his arms and legs. The latter says if the brute had been shod "he would have ruined me."
